Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 24 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
More changeable with most frequent showers in the north.

Today:
Cloudy with some light rain in the south. Showers continuing to feed across Northern Ireland and into Scotland, mainly western areas. Mostly dry over Wales, central and northern England with good sunny spells. Windy in the north.

Tonight:
Variable cloud with some breaks, mainly in the east. Showers at times in west and northern parts, and perhaps some light rain running along the south coast. Chilly in places.

Thursday:
Rather cloudy in west with showers, particularly in the northwest. Good sunny spells in east but a few showers possible here by day.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Unsettled and turning colder on Friday with showers turning wintry in the north later. Drier on Saturday for many before turning unsettled and windy again. Temperatures returning to around average.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.